Early 20th Century Antique Sideboard Cabinet Painted Black With Carved Fox and Bird Hunting Motif

Impressive carving accents the doors of this Renaissance Revival oak sideboard. The applied carved fox and bird on left door and (likely) pheasant on the right along with oak leaves creates a black forest hunting feel to the piece. The newly professionally applied black paint has been rubbed out in areas which further highlights the carved elements including side trim, panels along the drawers and bun feet. Brass pulls make the drawers easy to use while the interior shelf configuration allows for multiple storage options. This sideboard has been restored and waxed; it is solid/stable and ready to be used and enjoyed. Any age related wear such as nicks, cracks, scratches are commensurate with age and do not impact the beauty nor function of this cabinet. We invite you to contact us with any questions regarding this or other pieces, and hope to assist you further.
