Late 19th Century Antique Pine Large Cupboard Cabinet With Upper Glass Doors

This pine cupboard has simple elements that make it special, such as the turned column accents and crown molding details along the top. This cupboard likely displayed the household china and serving ware in the 1800's. The top section with glass doors is raised with large finials and a paneled back splash used as support, allowing for serving or buffet space between the upper and lower cabinets. The cupboard is built in two sections and has been given a wax finish, bringing out the warmth of the natural pine. The drawers run smooth, it is in good condition and ready for use. Any nicks, scratches, distress, or signs of wear are commensurate with generations of use and do not detract from the beauty nor function of this large display cabinet.
